

Unable to load file

Try to load it again or send an error report.

Reload

Click to add speaker notes

By Ryan Meyer

2 One reason I wanted to learn how to drive is because my dream car was sports cars, like that of my family members own race shells.

3 The Different Pedals

4 Goal One: Learn How to Start the Car
For One and Two I had to learn how to balance the clutch and the gas to order to get the car moving.
Struggle: In the beginning I would typically stall, but I would either add too much gas or I would add not enough. It was really hard to find that perfect middle.
Insights: This first step pushed me because I heard me say "oh" for something I can't see. Typically with cars I like to be perfect, and I wasn't able to.

5 Learning the Different Gears

6 Goal Two: Learn the Different Gears
For Three I learned about the different gears and where I should switch into a gear.
Struggle: It was really hard not to look down while driving, also because I couldn't look down it was hard for me to switch into the correct gear. Also, although I have to switch it downshifting.

Insights: After a while of practice, I was able to learn about how it works exactly starts to get the car moving. By day two, I was more confident to start the car.
Feedback: My dad was really helpful in telling me when I was being added too much gas. Also he told me to go slower, and that the moment the clutch catches the gas. In the beginning I learned really well but by day two after I had already succeeded it was hard for me to take advice and not get frustrated.

Insights: I really liked my ride to shift gears. It wasn't hard for me to know when the right time was, even after a while, I was down at about five feet but I never eventually third gear. Nothing got down was a little embarrassing.
Feedback: I drove with my mom and she told me I was a natural with the car that could see, practice the gears for that.

